Sushi to go that really makes an effort and a dinner menu that wows.

The Venue

In Southwark right behind the Tate Modern, Tsuru is the perfect beginning or end to a cultural excursion. It is centrally located, meaning it can also function as a great place to eat fast but healthy on your lunch break if you work in the area, or have a quiet and pleasant dinner at the end of a long day.

The Atmosphere

If you weren't wearing your spectacles during your lunch, you may be fooled into thinking this is just one in a series of chain restaurants that provide mediocre takeaway. Look closely, and the clean lines and practical decor may resemble an upscale Yo Sushi or Pret a Manger, but more ethical and with heart. Tsuru uses all biodegradable plastics, so if you love sushi, but hate its packaging, look no further. For those with time to spare while picking up lunch, there are sleekly designed Japanese benches and tables at the back, so you can ponder over your green tea. At dinner, Tsuru is transformed by candlelight, the takeaway counter is taken away making for a romantic atmosphere to wine and dine someone.
